

Steps to connect to COCC Open Community Network

What is COCC's Open Community Network? The "Open Community Wireless Network" is available in the CCB building. This wireless network does not require a username and password once you connect and will allow ready access to the Internet. Below are instructions to access this free COCC service.

- 1) Access the wireless connections available from your laptop. Typically, you can find by looking in the notification bar area at the bottom right of your laptop monitor. Right click and you should see an option called "open community network" – this is the wireless internet connection that doesn't require your COCC login. Note: if you don't see the wireless connections in the notification tray, you may also need to access via the Control Panel, Network options (look for something that indicates connecting to a network)

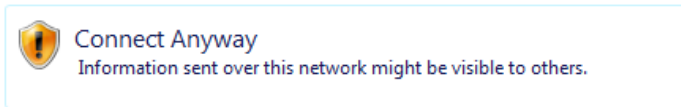

- 2) Click on the Open Community Network option and then click Connect.

3) If you receive an unsecure message click – connect anyway

Open Community Network is an unsecured network

➔ Connect to a different network

4) You are now connected – and you can open your internet browser

Successfully connected to Open Community Network

Save this network

Start this connection automatically

Next