Learn more about the Central Oregon SBDC at OregonSBDC.org/centraloregon
The Central Oregon SBDC helps businesses at every stage. Oregon’s SBDCs are funded through a cooperative agreement between the Small Business Administration and Business Oregon, and are hosted at Oregon’s 17 community colleges, Eastern Oregon University and Southern Oregon University.

Advising
Small businesses receive advising from experienced business experts at no cost to the business owner. SBDC advisers provide confidential advising on marketing, finance, operations and business planning.

Instruction
SBDCs offer training and instruction on a variety of topics including capital access, marketing, social media, operations, human resources, bookkeeping and business planning. SBDCs often coordinate with government agencies to teach about new laws and policies.

34 Online Classes Offered in 2020 at the Central Oregon SBDC

COVID-19 Response
SBDCs have been the front lines of the COVID-19 response for small businesses. Working with the SBA, SBDCs have provided technical assistance to businesses accessing federal relief programs. SBDCs are also helping businesses plan for reopening safely with improved procedures and business plans.

Minorities
Minority business owners are an important part of Oregon’s economy and often struggle to access capital or other services. SBDCs help by offering advising and instruction in both English and Spanish, and with advisers from these communities who connect business owners with the best resources.

101 Minority Small Businesses Served in 2020 at the Central Oregon SBDC

Wildfire Response
SBDCs help businesses that have been impacted by wildfires. Advisers walk businesses through the steps to recovery, assisting with paperwork and providing a comforting hand during difficult times. Centers connect businesses with government assistance when needed, and help with the long term needs, such as reworking business plans.
