TODOS BLOG

A great thing about having wonderful partners like Barcelona SAE are the resources they bring to the table. I have been having a great time reading through the postings on the TODOS blog (<https://blog.barcelonasae.com/todos-blog/>). Many postings are from recent participants discussing various aspects of their experiences in Barcelona. Devin Fisher's post (<https://blog.barcelonasae.com/settling-in-barcelona/>) about settling into Barcelona might be a good starting point but explore and see what you find. What is your favorite or most intriguing post? (Stairway to Heaven mentioned by Devin)

TAPAS

A decade or so ago I was on a walking tour of Galicia (northwest Spain) and I have a distinct memory of thinking I was heading out to have dinner and being surprised when I got a small plate of anchovies. In hindsight it was way too early for dinner in Spain (only 8:00) so they assumed I wanted tapas. Barcelona is famous for its tapas though each region has local traditions and cuisine. We will no doubt share the local tapas that we discover in Barcelona with each other. Here are a couple of articles about tapas both generally and in Barcelona to whet your appetite. PLACES IN BARCELONA

Parc del Laberint d'Horta:

We have the Terrebonne Corn Maze but Barcelona has the Laberint d'Horta. This classical garden in the north-east barrio of Horta has a labyrinth formed of cypress hedges as well as other gardens. The labyrinth is apparently quite challenging. More importantly, because the number of visitors at a given time is limited, the gardens are a peaceful and beautiful island in the midst of the bustle of the city.

TODOS Scholarships:

Barcelona SAE offers a number of need based scholarships that you might qualify for. Take a look at <https://blog.barcelonasae.com/todos-scholarships/> to see what's available.
